

NEWS RELEASE

19th June 2009

Children and teenagers need protection from the dangers of the internet.

Avanquest Solutions launched Net Nanny Mac in the UK at the end of 2008. Until then, there had not been an Apple compatible solution to the problem of filtering out unwanted internet content. The software, which provides a further lever of protection to the parental controls in the Mac OS X Leopard operating system, has been well received by the Mac community.

Net Nanny for Mac 2.0 includes stronger filtering and anti-predator capabilities, age-based profile settings and remote management capabilities with an easier to use interface for applying filtering options.

If you are concerned about Gaming – Net Nanny Mac 2.0 Game filtering allows you to filter the IP addresses of 40 major games (WOW, Quake, UT, etc.), based on content and rating.

“Parents are worried about the constantly evolving dangers of the internet” said Catherine Hodges, Marketing Manager at Avanquest Solutions. “With Net Nanny for Mac, users can protect their computers and safeguard their children from unwanted Internet content. The software establishes a barrier around your computer with its predefined categories, but also allows users to create their own custom categories, offering a level of protection that is unmatched.”

Here are a few reasons why Net Nanny is far superior to Apple's parental controls in Leopard.

- Blocks Specific Protocols like Streaming Video or Peer-to-Peer.
- Regularly Updated Filters.
- Anti-Predator Mode in Chat Sessions.

Notes to Editors:

Net Nanny Mac 2.0 costs £21.27 for a single user DVD. Licensing costs start at £19.32 per license for up to 5 users, reducing to £9.93 per license for 500 users and above. Prices quoted exclude VAT.
